

CONTENTS

	Foreword by David McConnell	vii
	‘HIST’ by Micheal O’Siadhail	xix
	Introduction	xxiii
	Acknowledgments	xxvi
	Abbreviations	xxvii
1	Edmund Burke’s Club and the Origins of the Historical Society, 1747-1769	1
2	The Foundation of the Historical Society, 1770-1778	7
3	‘A Theatre of War and of Tumult’: the First Golden Age of Oratory, 1779-1789	18
4	The Age of Rebellion, 1790-1800	37
5	‘A Nursery of Insubordination’: the Dissolving of the Society, 1801-1815	57
6	In the Shadow of a Great Name, 1816-1844	82
7	Resurrection and Return, 1843-1857	104
8	The Second Golden Age of Oratory, 1858-1865	122
9	‘An Echo of Old Times’: the Controversy of 1866	137
10	‘Injurious to Peace’: the Society in Conflict, 1867-1876	144
11	‘All that is best and most illustrious in Irish life’, 1877-1900	161
12	‘The finest display of oratory I ever heard’: The College Historical Society and the riddle of Ulysses	177
13	In the Shadow of War, 1901-1914	189

14	‘The Great Struggle for Empire’: The Society and the First World War and its Aftermath, 1914-1920	201
15	‘The Hist’ in the Age of Public Discourse, 1920-1929	212
16	Challenges to Freedom: ‘The Hist’ in the 1930s.	237
17	‘The Cause of Truth’: the Society and the Second World War, 1939-1945	272
18	‘A Sphere of Ideas’: the Society in the Post-War Years, 1945-1959	291
19	‘Something Fundamentally Constitutional and Democratic’: the Society in the 1960s	318
20	‘The Greatest of all the Schools of the Orators’: The Hist in its Bicentenary Year	353
21	Debating Belief, Debating Facts, 1970-1979	361
22	A New Era, 1979-1989	384
23	Making a Difference, 1990-1999	404
24	The School for Oratory in the Twenty-first Century	432
	Bibliography	472
	Index	482

The illustrations have been placed together in one section between page 236 and 237. The first page of this section contains the Table of Illustrations.